The local government in Greece

Local government in Greece has a long history. From the city - states of antiquity, in the communities of the Turkish occupation to the municipalities of today, citizens were always addressing for solving everyday problems to the local governor.

Today, Greece is a parliamentary republic under the 1975 Constitution. The Hellenic Republic is a unitary State organised on a decentralised basis; it comprises two levels of governance, the central – state governance and the local self-government. The former is exercised centrally (government-ministries) as well as at a decentralised level (Decentralised Administration- Apokentromeni Diikisi), while the latter is exercised at regional (Regions - Periferies) and municipal level (Municipalities - Dimi).

Since January 1, 2011, when the “Kallikrates Reform” entered officially into force, the Hellenic Republic comprises 7 Decentralised Administrations, 13 Regions and 325 Municipalities. (Ministry of Interior, 2012)

Latest reforms in local government

The structure of the State in Greece used to be much more centralised but over the last decades it has been undergoing reforms which ended up with the adoption of an extensive administrative reform in 2010 called “Kallikrates”. (Ministry of Interior, 2012)

The decentralisation process started in 1986 (Law 1622/1986 and Presidential Decree 51/1987) with the conversion of prefectures in elected Prefectural Administrations and the creation of 13 Regions. Decentralisation was strengthened in 1994 with elected prefectoral bodies and the extension of the municipalities’ competences (Law 2218/1994). In 1997, the “Kapodistrias Plan” (Law 2539/1997) changed, through merging, the administrative boundaries of first-level self-government authorities (dimi & kinotites) reducing them, from 5,921 (361 municipalities and 5,560 communities) to 1,034 (900 municipalities and 134 communities), without even changing their previous institutional status. The Code for Municipalities and Communities in 2006 (Law 3463/2006) constituted the main legislative text for their function.

The 2010 Kallikrates Program (Law 3852/2010) reorganised the territorial division by uniting existing municipalities and communities, modified the vertical division of competences in favour of municipalities and abolished decentralised public administrations. Finally, the Hellenic Republic has adopted the Law 4071/2012 with provisions for local development, reinforcement of local government and settlements on special issues of local authorities.

The principles of decentralisation and local self-government are enshrined in the Constitution. The local and regional self-government authorities are the expression of popular sovereignty and constitute a fundamental institution in the public life of the Greeks, as guaranteed by the provisions of Article 102 of the Constitution and the European Charter of Local Self-Government ratified by Law 1850/1989, taking account of the reservations expressed on a few articles. (Ministry of Interior, 2012)

The above changes are summarized in the following table:

The “Kallikrates Reform” set up 7 Decentralised Administrations that preserve functions which the state determined to keep under its authority rather than to transfer to the regions. They are governed by a general secretary, who is appointed by the Ministry of interior, and are mainly in charge of implementing and monitoring central government legislation at the local level in areas like immigration, public property, environment and spatial planning. As the go-between the central government and the municipalities, they have a supervisory and monitoring task for the municipalities. (OECD, 2014)

The 13 Regions are responsible for the administration of affairs of their district. They shape, plan and implement policies at regional level as part of their responsibilities under the principles of sustainable development and social cohesion of the country, taking into account of national and European policies.

The 325 Municipalities are responsible for the administration of local affairs. They manage and regulate all local matters in accordance with the principles of subsidiarity and proximity with the aim of protection, development and continuous improvement of the interests and the quality of life of local society.

There is no hierarchical control and relationship between the Regions and the Municipalities.

The Kallikrates Program further describes the territorial organisation and the division of powers between the different levels of governance.

Greece's position in the self-governing map of Europe can be seen in the table below. As it is shown the reforms have decreased the number of local authorities classifying Greece among the countries with a compact self-governing basis.

Regions, decision-making bodies, powers

Regions are the authorities of the second grade of the Local Government in Greece. The institutional status and registered position are rooted in provisions of the Law 3852/2010.

According to the explanatory statement of the above law, the establishment of strong self-governing regions is a bold rupture and a great opportunity for the local communities of our country. As demonstrated by the examples of other countries in South Europe, particularly in Italy, France and Spain, the establishment of regional government strengthens and accelerates the growth performance and significantly contributes to the alleviation of interregional and intraregional disparities. The creation of self-governing regions can also be implemented for the long overdue need to create a schema of metropolitan governance in order to organize in democratically drafted and administratively effective manner the exercise of significant metropolitan functions. (Explanatory Statement of Law 3852/2010)

Instruments of the region are the Prefect, and Vice Prefects, the Regional Council, the Financial Committee and the Executive Board. In each region the Prefect is assisted by the Vice Prefects who are directly elected in correspondence to the number of regional units and who do not occupy a regional councillor position.

Regions exercise their responsibilities/competences within the framework of the relevant laws and administrative regulations, in the fields of:

- Planning/Programming and regional development including investment
- Agriculture/livestock and fisheries
- Natural resources, energy and industry (water management, mineral wealth, energy, industry and manufacturing)
- Employment, trade and tourism
- Transport and communications
- Public works, urbanism, spatial planning, environment
- Health
- Education, culture and sport
- Civil protection – Logistics

In order to address supra-local problems in a uniform way, the metropolitan region of Attica and the regional metropolitan unit of Thessaloniki (Region of Central Macedonia), in addition to their regional responsibilities, may exercise metropolitan responsibilities in the following areas:

- Environment and Quality of Life
- Spatial Planning and Urban Regeneration
- Transports and Communications
- Civil protection and Security beyond the municipal administrative boundaries

Regions exercise their powers taking into account:

- The relevant national, regional and European policies
- The need for cooperation and coordination with other regional authorities and organizations
- The available resources to meet their responsibilities, and the need to ensure their beneficial, efficient use and equitable distribution
- The need for organizing services to ensure their adequacy, quality and effectiveness
- The need for sustainable development and protection of the cultural heritage

(Ministry of Interior, 2012)

Municipalities, decision-making bodies, powers

Municipalities are the authorities of the first grade of the Local Government in Greece. The institutional status and registered position are rooted in provisions of the Law 3852/2010.

According to the explanatory statement of the above law, the new municipalities with adequate human and financial resources can take a wide range of powers which, in a modern state, must be brought close to the citizen and with knowledge of local conditions. These new municipalities can meet new big challenge for the government of our country, which is, taking an important and active role in providing social services. (Explanatory Statement of Law 3852/2010)

The new municipalities can offer to its citizens the services of government in the 21st century, staffed properly and able to implement e-government methods, cost accounting and management by objectives, with a new intra-municipal decentralization system and with new control institutions and monitoring of their action. (Explanatory Statement of Law 3852/2010)

Each municipality is governed by the Municipal Council, the Financial Committee, the Quality of Life Committee, the Executive Committee and the Mayor.

Municipalities exercise their powers/responsibilities according to the relevant legislation, regulations and management regulations adopted by them (local regulatory decisions) in the fields of:

- Development
- Building permits and urban planning applications
- Environment
- Quality of life & Cities' proper functioning
- Employment
- Social protection and solidarity
- Education, culture and sport
- Agricultural Development, livestock and fisheries
- Civil protection
- Issuing professional licenses
- Transport infrastructure
- Local development initiatives
- Tourism

With a view to providing better services, municipalities may also exercise state responsibilities at local level which have been assigned to them by law.

It should be underlined that insular and mountain municipalities undertake additional responsibilities otherwise they are exercised by the regions to better serve the local population in accordance with the subsidiarity principle.

Municipal authorities exercise their powers taking into account:

- Related national, regional and European policies

- The need for coordination with other local or public authorities which have the power to act and own resources in their region
- The availability of resources and their beneficial, efficient use and equitable distribution
- The need to organise adequate, qualified and efficient services in order to better serve residents
- The need for high quality environmental protection, protection of cultural heritage and the promotion of sustainable development of these areas.

(Ministry of Interior, 2012)

Information and statistics for municipalities

The 325 Municipalities in Greece are elected authorities of the local government of the first grade. They are self-governed under the supervision of the Greek State through the 7 bodies of the Decentralized Administration.

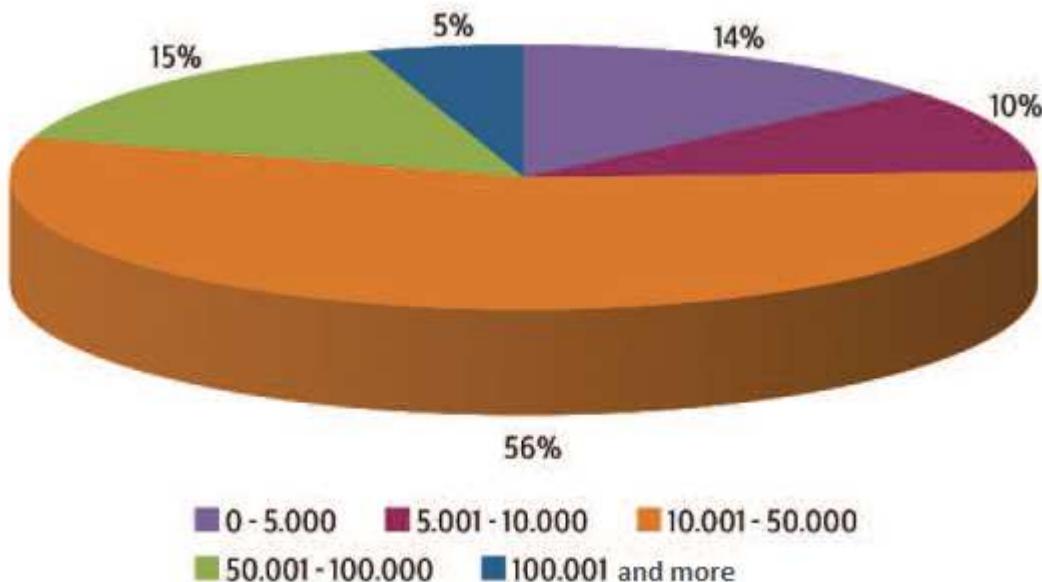

These local authorities cover all around Greece territory – islands, mountains, rural areas, cities – so they have significant differences and are characterized by great heterogeneity.

Detailed data of the 325 municipalities in Greece are presented in the Annex at the end of this paper.

Let's examine the differences in population:

Graph 2.4. Distribution of municipalities by population rank
(Real Population 2011)

Source: E.E.T.A.A. S.A., The municipalities in numbers, 2014

The majority of the municipalities (56% of the total) have a population from 10,000 to 50,000. But there is still a significant proportion (14% of the total) with a population up to 5,000; these municipalities face serious problems in operation and implementation of the current legislation.

Only in the Municipality of Rhodes, females are fewer than males and account for 49.9% of the Resident Population. This is because Municipality of Rhodes is predominantly rural in contrary to the rest that are urban. The above ten (10) larger in population municipalities may have to deal with social disparity in the cities (with the exception of Rhodes) but they have the human resources to implement the current legislation.

The above ten (10) smaller in population municipalities, which are all insular, face serious problems for survival, health, communication and transport and they do not have the human resources to implement the current legislation and the requirements of bureaucracy.

Another important event giving rise to problems for many municipalities is the large geographical area they cover. The following table shows the ten (10) larger in area municipalities.

The majority of the municipalities (58% of the total) cover an area of more than 300 Km². The difficult situation is for the 22 municipalities (6.8% of the total) with an area of over 1,000 Km². These municipalities face serious problems in providing the same quality of services both to the central and the remote settlements.

Graph 2.6. Distribution of municipalities by population density
(Inhabitants per Km²)

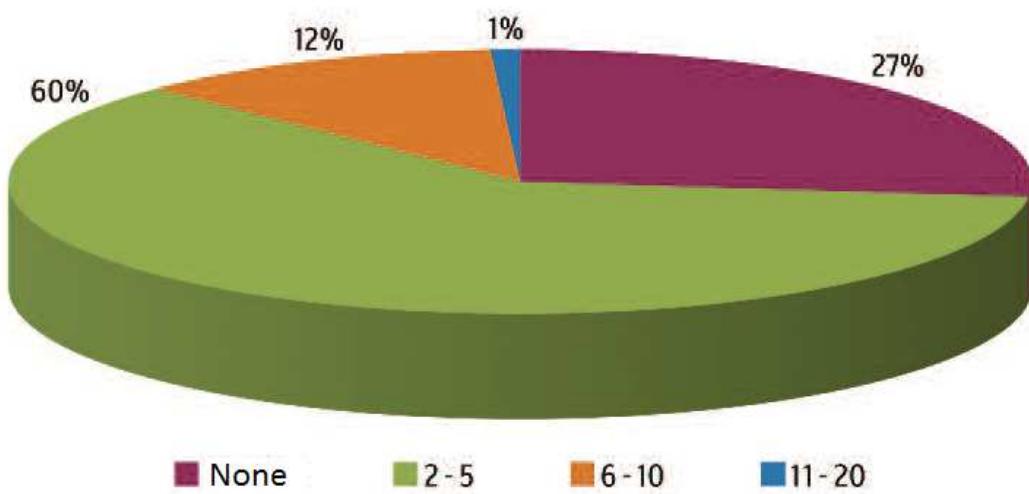

Source: E.E.T.A.A. S.A., The municipalities in numbers, 2014

The table shows that the majority of the municipalities (53% of the total) have a population density from 20 to 100 residents per Km².

Graph 2.7. Distribution of municipalities by the number of municipal sections
(Municipal sections)

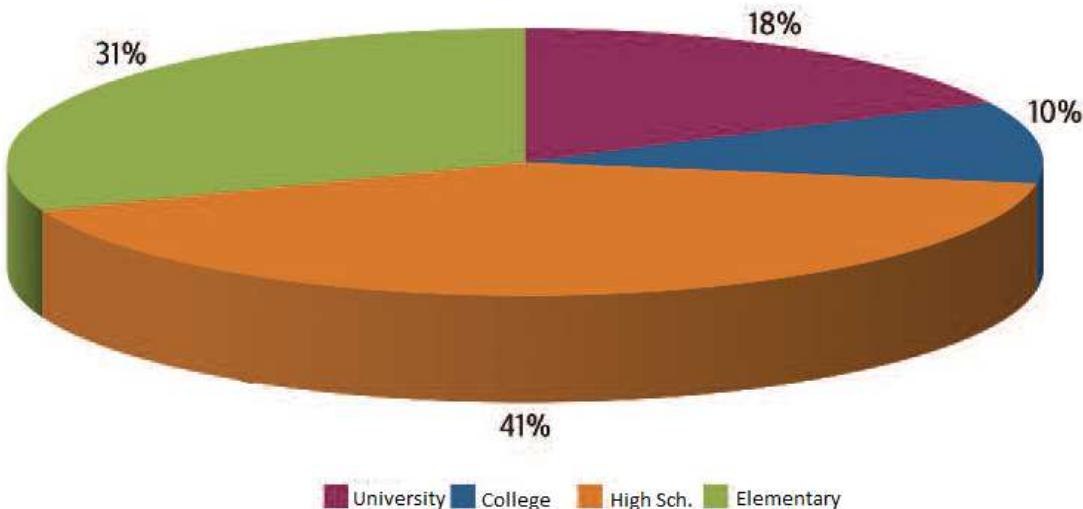

Source: E.E.T.A.A. S.A., The municipalities in numbers, 2014

The table shows that the majority of the municipalities (87% of the total) have derived from the merger of up to 5 municipalities. The difficult situation is for those municipalities (13% of the total) that have to homogenize 6 or more former municipalities and communities in a uniform entity.

Another disadvantage that all municipalities face is the lack of educated and qualified employees. This lack is exacerbated by the restriction for recruitments during the years 2010 to 2016 (as enacted by the Laws 3833/2010, 3986/2011 and 4093/2012).

The following table presents the staff that serves in the municipalities distributed by the level of their education.

Graph 2.8. Distribution of municipalities' staff by the education level
(Level of education)

Source: E.E.T.A.A. S.A., The municipalities in numbers, 2014

The table shows that only a minority of 28% of the employees hold a university or college degree, while the rest 72% of the total have finished elementary or high school. That fact holds the municipalities from designing and implementing pioneering projects to solve problems of today.
